nized on Wednesday aftermoon at the home of the bride's parents in Independence. The society people of both towns filled the handsome apartments which were transformed into howers of floral loveliness by masses of roses, lessaminer, sweet peas, illes and carnations whose sweet fragrance filled the air.

Just prior to the ceremony, Miss Ola Galliber sang "Thou Art Mine Own," accompanied by Zimmerschied's orchestra. Then the notes of the march from "Lohengrin" sounded softly at first, then with increasing volume until the bride and groom appeared, preceded by the bridesmalds, Miss Pauline Ellison and Miss Katle Mercer.

Those who received invitations found themselves asked to attend a session of the "American Board of Strategy" to be held on "Sagasta's Bluff." the purpose of the session to discuss "Spanish 4s." The house was decorated with national colors and flags, and at luncheon the table flowers preserved the idea, also. The young hostess contrived also to include the colors in her agretty costume. As for the card game, the cards themselves were delightfully unique, for, instead of clubs, spades, hearts and diamonds, flags were used; the American, Spanish, Cuban and Red Cross, Pen and link sketches of personages notable in the present war served as face cards. Uncle Sam, Columbia and John Bull with the American flags; the queen, Alphonso XIII., and Sagasta, with the Spanish; Gomez, Miss Cuba and Weyler with the Cubans; and a Red Cross soldier, Miss Baris, lag cards as in the game of hearts the heart cards are under the ban. Miss Keebler and torpedoes signaled the close of each game. A beautiful bouquet of American Beanty roses was given Miss Edna Jackson, who won the first prize. Miss Grace Potter won the second prize. The guests were:

The study of English history through the medium of "Green's Short History of the English People," has engaged the South Side Literary Society for the past two years. The conclusion of the course is mapped out in a thorough and comprehensive way in the society's year book for 1888-89, recently issued, a dainty booklet bound in pearl gray, and having on its cover a spray of oak leaves and acorns. English literature and religion hold almost as important a place in Green's work, as the story of the long struggle by which the English people wrested the recognition of their rights, bit by bit, from kings and mobles. In the society's plan of study, too, literature and religion are given equal place with the political history.

The quotation from Oliver Wendell Holmes which precedes the calendar in this artistic booklet is notably in accord with sentiments expressed by many prominent Britons and Americans at the present moment:

The 'One Summer' Club will give its next dancing party at Fairmount park, Tuesday evening, June 28.

The ladies of the Independence Avenue M. E. church will give an ice cream social on the parsonage lawn Tuesday evening, June II.

A number of society young men will give a dancing party at Fairmount park Saturday in compilment to the members of the German Club.

Miss Frances Reynolds, Miss Mabel Garner.

A few events, but these of unusual interest, saved society from utter stagnation last week. Among these was the very delightful card party given by Mrs. Irwin Ritchey on Tuesday evening at the home boulevard. The guests were invited to meet Mr. Snyder's guest, Miss Grace Potter, of Boston. An interesting contest at cards resulted in the awarding of the prizes to Miss May Jewett, Miss Bessie Burt, Mr. Presley Wilhite and Mr. Web Withers. The guests were: Britons and Americans at the present moment:

Thou glorious island of the sea.

Though wide the wasting flood
That parts our distant land from thee.
We claim thy generous blood:
Nor o'er thy far horizon springs
Oue hallewed star of fame.
But kindles, like an angel's wings,
Our Western skies in flame!

Two especially important days in the calendar are the Athenaeum Reciprocity day.
January 10, when Dr. W. P. George will deliver a lecture on Tennyson; and the closing session, occurring on May 2, when a lecture entitled "Impressions of England" will be given by Right Rev. Mr. E. R.

miss Pauline Ellison and Miss Katie Mercer.

The bride wore a girlishly charming frock of white organdic and valenciennes lace with wide satin sash. She carried illies of the valley and wore but one ornament, the groom's gift, an emerald and pearl crescent of handsome design. The maids were count of handsome design. The maids were powned in white swiss with lace and carried carnations.

During the ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. Mr. Alexander Proctor, the bride and groom stood within a floral shell formed of Cape Jessamines and smilax while above their heads was suspended a lovely wreath. The picture was one of enchantment as though some fairy wand had touched the shell, making it glow with color and light.

At the close of the ceremony the orchestra played Mendelssohn's wedding march and a short reception was held.

Mr. and Mrs. Brown left the same evening for the East, and will be at home after September 1, at their residence on West Maple avenue, Independence.

Colonel and Mrs. Mercer were assisted during the reception by Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Ziek, Mr. and Mrs. Bartlett.

CO-OPERATIVE HOUSEKEEPING. Canadian Women Plan a Utopian Scheme-To He Shown at the Paris Fair.

Word comes from Ottawa, Ontario, that that long-cherished vision of burdened housewives—the co-operative scheme of ousekeeping-is in a fair way of realization, and may be first put in operation at the Paris exposition, in 1909. Mrs. Cole-man Stuckert, of Lindsay, Ontario, is the moving power behind this Utopian project, and she seeks the co-operation of the Do-and she seeks the co-operation of the Dominion government. Her plan, briefly outlined, is as follows:

Around the outside of a block of land are to be erected forty-four houses, all connected so as to form a square of buildings. Each house will have either two or three stories, and none will be more than two rooms deep, so as to afford ample light and abundant fresh zir. In the central court will be erected a large, two-story building, where will be the kitchen, laundry, cold storage plant and dynamo, an improved heating apparatus for supplying electric light and steam heat for the forty houses. On the second floor of this building will be a kindergarten, a library and a large hall. The "model homes" will be all connected with the central building by speaking tubes, or telephones, and an electric conduit for carrying the hampers to and from the kitchen. The refuse and dirty dishes will be sent back to the central kitchen to be washed.

In this way the housewife will be spared washed.

In this way the housewife will be spared the trouble of preparing the meals, and the servant question is solved. The employes will all be skilled, as the community will be able to pay large wages. The space inclosed by the block of houses, and on either side of the central building, can be used for lawn tennis and other grounds. The affairs of this model community, as planned will

According to Mrs. Stuckert, all the comforts of the finest homes can be enjoyed for less than half the usual cost for the service. She assertz that the table expenses with a liberal bill of fare, will amount to but $2 per capita each week.

RAG CARPET PARTIES.

An Old-Pashioned Festivity Revived and Modernised in These

The rag carpet, after many years, has returned. It is once again fairly popular, and the rags that for a quarter of a century have been going to the rag man are now being treasured up, since, if they are of wool, they are almost worth their weight wool, they are almost worth their weight in gold. Why the rag carpet ever did go out of style it is hard to determine, and its reappearance in society is not difficult to understand. Properly put together and made of a good assortment of rags, it is exceedingly pretty, and withal easy to manufacture, all the knack needed being the skill necessary to cut the rags into strips sew them together in lengths and wind them into a ball. For a small sum the rag carpet weaver does the rest.

Bathroom and study rugs are the chief uses of the rag carpet of to-day. It is not so much rag carpets, in fact, as it is rag carpet rugs. The rag carpet rug is not large, as a rule. Six feet by three would be quite an extraordinary size. The idea is to have quite a number of them, and these much smaller.

They clean easily and wear like iron. These facts especially commend them. Then, too, there is much sociability in their making. A rag carpet party is a jovial event, and a "function" that, long neglected, is coming in again once more. The girls meet of an afternoon and sew rags until 5 or half-past. Then the men, especially asked for this hour, begin to drift in, and there is afternoon tea. It is the modernizing of the old-time "sewing bee," and it works marvelously well as an amusement. in gold. Why the rag carpet ever did go out

Arthur Bride mysteriously disappeared rom his home in Tonawanda, N. Y., sixteen years ago, and since had been mournout that he wandered to the Northwest, and, making up his mind to "get there," he made a study of chemistry, mineralogy and other sciences connected with mining. He was right on the spot, with plenty of funds, knowledge and experience, when the Klondike strike was made, and has just returned to his home with a fortune of $300,000 in his possession and deeds to three developed gold mines valued conservatively at $3,000,000.

Bride began prospecting in British Columbia in 1887, locating two good mines, which he sold at a good profit, one of them being the Iron Mark, at Kalmoaps. In 1894 he was with a party from Kingston, Canada, which went up the Stewart river. He finally branched out by himself and located good claims near the Klondike.

Bride is now buying bicycles, etc., for his nephews and starting his poor relatives in business.

Some little relish beside the crackers or wafers must be served with the tea for the hungry party, and there will be no danger of this spoiling the appetito for the dinner later.

There is an Indian delicacy that promises to be popular. A hot water plate is placed over a gas stove or alcohol flame. In the upper receptacle place two tablespoonfuls of butter, two of anchovy essence, two beaten eggs, and cavenne pepper to taste, and make the whole smoking hot. Have ready strips of freshly made toast, dip them in the mixture, and serve on hot plates at once. This is an evening "plck-me-up" in India.

At a recent tea crumpets and caviare with cups of delicate cocoa seemed the summum bonum in the way of an appetizing dainty. The crumpets were English, such as are sold by all city bakers; they were brought from the kitchen very hot, and were toasted and spread by the hostess under the eyes of her guests with butter and Russian caviare. This gives one as near an approach as it is possible to get outside of Russia to blint au caviare, which is made with a thin, delicate cake peculiar to Russia. Toast may be substituted for the crumpets if they cannot be conveniently secured.

Broad Belts in Vogue.

Broad, soft belts are in vogue again. They are specially suited to slender, graceful women. The prettiest are made of very soft satin ribbon in the bright plaids and stripes, or plain black or white. The ends are plaited into a small fancy buckle, but in the back and on the side the ribbon hugs the figure high up, girdle fashion. Broad, soft belts have one distinct advantage over the narrow leather or jeweled ones; they can be pulled down and pinned firmly to the skirt, keeping it from parting from the shirt waist. Buckles with enameled flags and shields are much used on these belts.

Genealogy on a Turtle's Shell.

James Barton, of Conkin. N. Y., has just unearthed on his farm a turtle which, in its way, is a family heirloom. Mr. Barton was plowing last week when the turtle was brought to light. On its shell was inscribed "Ashabel Hastings, July 24, 1824; Joel Barton, June 16, 1863." Ashabel Hastings was James Barton's grandfather, and Joel Barton his father. A short distance from the field is a road where, while Ashabel Hastings was yet living, the turtle was found and marked by Joel Barton. Ashabel said at the time of its first capture it was apparently old. It, is thought the turtle is more than a hundred years old. James Barton inscribed his name on the shell and set it free, to bear the record to future generations.

IN THE DEVIL'S POCKET.

Story of How a Herd of Buffaloes Drove Away the Indians.

From the Philadelphia Inquirer Colonel Rawlins, of the United States cavalry, said: "Led by our guide, my command had taken refuge from an Indian attack in the Devil's Pocket." The listeners smiled, but their smile faded as the coionel continued: "The Devil's Pocket proved to be a deep cleft or canon in the side of a high bluff. The entrance was not more than a dozen cleft or canon in the side of a high bluff.

The entrance was not more than a dozen feet in width, but it gradually widened as it penetrated the bluff, until there was ample room for a company of soldiers. Ine place was a natural fortress, and ten skillful marksmen could have held it against a thousand redskins.

"As soon as we had safely gained the interior we dismounted, and, leaving our horses at the forward end of the capon, manned the entrance, ready to welcome the redskins in case they concluded to call on us, which we soon learned that they did.

"Thrice they charged up to the mouth of the canon, and thrice we drove them back. We wasted no shots, and when they fell back for the third time the plain in front of our retreat was thickly dotted, with the bodies of dead and wounded Indians and their ponies.

"The redskins were not used to this one-sided sort of warfare, and it was evident that they didn't relish it. Instead of charging again, they tried a new tack. Retiring out of range, they camped directly in front of our retreat, apparently with the intention of starving us out. Here they remained all that night and the next day, and the succeeding morning found them there.

"We had eaten the last of our scanty provisions, there was no water in the canon, and the men were suffering greatly from thirst and hunger, two enemies which it was evident would soon accomplish what the redskins had thus far failed in doing.

"The situation was fast growing desperate, and I was about to order my men to mount and force their way or die bravely fighting for their liberty, when suddenly, away off to the right, a cloud of dust came rolling up over the horizon. It grew thicker, and I was about to order my men to mount and force their way or die bravely fighting for their liberty, when suddenly, away off to the right, a cloud of dust came rolling up over the horizon. It grew thicker in volume as it moved swiftly in our direction. Pointing to the unusual spectacle I asked Hardy what it means, chuckled the old scout. 'An' it'

"'Few, hey?' snorted Hardy. Thar air thousands of the critters comin' along with that cloud of dust; an' they're about the only animal an Injun'il run from.'
"Jack Hardy was right. Sweeping resistlessly along beneath that advancing dust cloud was a countless throng of shaggy heasts, with lowered heads and flashing "On they came, nearer and nearer, headed straight across the plain in front of the bluff. The Indians, intent on watching us, saw their danger when it was too late. They must either meet that living avalanche and scatter it, or go down before it.

"A few ran for their ponies and quickly mounted, while the remainder awaited the inevitable collision on foot. They filled the air with piercing yells and fired wildly at the approaching mass, but all to no avail. Majestic and terrible, that awful sea came "The mighty herd passed on, but in its pathway no living thing was left to tell the tale of that brief but deadly struggle. Our savage foes would trouble us no more!"

Rigidity of Censorship. Rigidity of Censorship.

Tampa is now under martial law, armed soldiers patrolling the streets day and night, and the telegraph office is under a very severe censorship. The words "arrived" and "departed" or words of a similar meaning are positively prohibited transmission.

The following story, told around the telegraph office, will give an idea of the rigidness of the censorship. A correspondent for one of the New York dailies filed a long story, which, after careful scrutiny by the censor, was returned to him with the information that he might send the address and signature of it, but nothing more.
